Royston Greenwood, University of Alberta School of Business, reveals the Call for Proposals for the 2008 OMT Division Professional Development Workshops.

The Organization and Management Theory division is a community built from a common desire to develop and promote understanding of organizations and organizing. We stand at the intersection of micro and macro analysis, providing a context for mutually beneficial intellectual engagement across disciplinary and other boundaries.

In Anaheim, August 8-10, 2008, we would like to see PDW sessions creatively and innovatively addressing the Division's Mission of attracting, developing and serving academics and practitioners who wish to advance understanding of organizations and organizing. Specifically, we would like to see submissions that address the conference theme of “The Questions We Ask”. Are we asking relevant questions? Are we missing important questions? PDW sessions have a very flexible structure but should have greater participant interaction than symposia in the regular program.

This year, for the first time, all submissions are to be submitted electronically: http://submissions.aomonline.org/2008

The deadline for submission is November 15, 2007. We encourage proposals that address the interests of a broad segment of Academy of Management members and ask proposal submitters to note whether their PDW will be of interest to members of divisions other than OMT.

In your submission, you will be asked for the following information:

- The title of your session;
- Contact information for submitter and names and affiliations of all facilitators;
- A brief (2 page) outline of the proposed session, including a statement of planned activities, rationale for workshop, and the target audience;
- Ideal room setup and time frame. Innovative proposals and those that address the 2008
AOM conference theme are particularly encouraged;
- Other divisions to which the session would be of interest.
